

Differentiate

To differentiate a function is to find its derivative. The derivative is the rate of change of a function with respect to one of its variables.

This is equivalent to finding the equation for the gradient of a function's graph.

If $y = f(x)$ is a function of x , the derivative is often written as $\frac{dy}{dx}$ or as $f'(x)$.